

On July 3rd Paul MacCready made the outstanding flight of the entire contest. The task was a distance along a fixed line, St. Yan through Toulon-Cuer. Paul won the admiration of everybody by flying until well after dark, finally landing on the shores of the Mediterranean at a French Naval Base, thus exceeding the distance flown by three others who had landed earlier at the Toulon-Cuer Airport, the last airport directly on the prescribed course. The Dauphine Alps presented a formidable barrier to most of the contestants.
