THE IDEA CORNER

by FRED B. FRIEDEWALD

As you have noticed, this column has not appeared for a number of issues. I wish to thank all the people who have inquired about it, and those who have sent in ideas. We should be back in business about the middle of summer. Getting a house built, and convincing my wife that I need a large work shop rather than a recreation room is taking most of my time.

For those who like to fly the desert and the mountains here is something that I think is a must. An 8-day emergency life pack. It contains enough food and water for one person to sustain life for 8 days. The nice part of it is that weight is low, 5 pounds, and it measures only 12" x 12" x 5". The water will last for 25 years and the food will last 5 years. Another feature about this kit is that it can be placed in the freezer and the frozen water can be used to keep your beer cold in a standard beer cooler. It will keep a large cooler cold for 24 hours. This can be done an indefinite number of times. This survival kit can be purchased from the Fidelity Investment Co., Brentwood Bank Bldg., St. Louis 17, Mo., for about $8.00.

BRIAN MASTERS IN U.S.

Brian Masters, who for many years was Deputy CFI at Lasham, one of the largest gliding centers in England, has recently come to the U.S. as Chief Flight Instructor of the Briegleb Soaring School at El Mirage Field, Adelanto, Calif.

Briegleb Soaring School now has an attractive pamphlet describing their operations that is available to interested persons on request.
